

2018 “Forty under 40” info graph

The headline of the graphic reads, “Indiana University’s Top of the class.” The headline is on a photograph of IU Bloomington’s iconic Sample Gates.

The subhead, beneath the headline, reads “Twenty-two of the Indianapolis Business Journal’s 2018 ‘Forty Under 40’ honorees have a direct connection to Indiana University. They are staff members, faculty, current students and alumni from 10 different IU entities.”

To help illustrate the subhead, there is an outline of a man and woman, both wearing graduation caps and gowns. To the right of the image, is a sentence that reads “Alumni from 10 different IU entities:”

Each of the 10 entities are spelled out in pictorial representations:

- School of Public Health, IU Bloomington; represented by an illustration of a vaccine
- McKinney School of Law, IUPUI; represented by an illustration of the “Scale of Justice”
- Maurer School of Law, IU Bloomington; represented by an illustration of a court house
- Kelley School of Business; represented by an illustration of a briefcase
- College of Arts and Sciences, IU Bloomington; represented by an illustration of a pencil
- College of Arts and Sciences, IPFW; represented by an illustration of a laptop
- School of Public & Environmental Affairs; represented by an illustration of a police car
- School of Education, IU Bloomington; represented by an illustration of books
- IU School of Medicine; represented by an illustration of a doctor
- Lilly Family School of Philanthropy, IUPUI; represented by an illustration of a hand holding a heart

Beneath those points are two squares that depict the last two pieces of facts from the graphic.

- Six of those being honored by the Indianapolis Business Journal are current faculty and staff members at IU. This is represented by an illustration of a man and woman working together on computers.
- One of those being honored by the Indianapolis Business Journal is a current IU student. This is represented by an illustration of a diploma.

At the bottom of the graphic, there is an Indiana University logo in the left corner and an Indianapolis Business Journal in the right corner.
