

IUPUI 2019 faculty class graphic

At the top of this red-and-white graphic is the headline "2019 Faculty Class" in red with the subhead of "IUPUI" in black type and a drawing of a pencil to the left of that in red. An asterisk is next to the name "IUPUI." To the left of the headline and subhead is the IU trident, white on a red tab.

There are five horizontal sections after the headline section, in this order:

A red section with white type has a clock icon on the left, followed by the information that there are 83 new full-time faculty members.

A white section with red type has a stack of books as an icon followed by the information that 19 percent of the new faculty members are tenured or tenure-track faculty and librarians. The percentage number is in black type.

A red section with white type has an icon of a teacher in front of a class on the left, followed with the information that 18 percent of the new faculty are lecturers.

A white section with red type has an icon of a briefcase on the left, followed with the information that 59 percent of the new faculty are visiting professors. The percentage is in black type.

A red section with white type has an icon of a globe on the left, followed with the information that 10 countries are represented by these new faculty members.

At the bottom-right of the graphic in smaller type is an asterisk and the words "Numbers include IUPUI, IUPUC and IU Fort Wayne"
